Adequate liming of soils is not to be taken lightly. Last week a soil test from Midland Bermuda grass on the John Alvis farm showed a pH drop of .7. On another farm in the edge of Charlotte County I looked at a piece of corn that appeared to have serious calcium deficiency. A soil test showed the pH level to be 4.3, the lowest test I've seen run. Over the past three years 370 pounds of nitrogen had been applied to the corn field.

Remember high rates of nitrogen and high moisture levels reduce the soil pH. Farm operators need to read (by soil test) the soil pH at least every three years and in many cases every two years.

Soil readings are just as important to the productivity of a field as the fuel indicator is to the operation of your tractor.

Tomato Blight - What to do about it? has been a frequent call this week.

There's a long list of recommended materials - Bravo, Dithane, Dyrene, Maneb, Manzate, Plyram, Zineb.

The best one is probably Bravo; it's also the most expensive.

What to do about blossom-end rot on tomatoes is an often asked question. Again, maintaining the proper soil pH is the most important step. The pH should be 6.5 to 6.8.

Blossom-end rot is closely related to the calcium nutrition of the plant. This is determined by the level of available calcium and soil moisture.

When blossom-end rot appears, tomatoes should be sprayed with a calcium chloride solution at the rate of 2 oz. in three gallons of water. Only 2 to 3 applications should be made.

During fiscal year '72 - '73 Appomattox County farmers submitted 625 soil samples for testing.

During the last 45 years more than 800 billion cans of food have been processed commercially. In this period there have been only 4 deaths reported from botulism caused by eating processed food. Over the same 45 year period, 700 people have died from eating home-canned food.

We are receiving reports that tobacco budworms in certain areas of the state are "resistant" to Sevin, Thiodan, and Lannate. There is a good possibility that this is not true resistance at least we are not finding it true in the lab. It's quite probably that with a lot of cloudy weather the tobacco buds have been tight and it was difficult to get the insecticide into the bud. We are still "high" on Bacillus thuringiensis as a control.

Azodrin promises to be very effective on the "resistant" budworm. Remember Azodrin is very toxic and should be used with extreme caution.

Homemaker Hints

Bread and cereal products may seem to make up a large part of your grocery list. If so, there are a few ways to spend less on these items.

1. Store brands may be cheaper than nationally advertized brands by several cents a loaf; 2. Save by buying day-old bread and other bakery products that have been marked down; 3. Look for the word "enriched" to be sure bread and bakery products are nourishing as well as filling; 4. You may save by baking your own bread, though not a great amount. Use enriched flour; 5. Buy only as much as you can use in a week. Bread can be frozen to retard spoilage but it takes up valuable freezer space; 6. Buy bread according to weight, not size; some breads are puffed up with air or gas to look bigger.
